Go to your focal point. Play one pitch at a time. All these are solid tips for improving your players' mental game. If you tell a batter to 1) put his back foot in the box, 2) take a long, slow breath and look at the bat label, and 3) step in and tell himself "See ball, hit ball," you may help him. That's a signature move from our bestselling book, Heads-Up Baseball, and a pre-pitch routine you saw daily if you watched the recent College World Series.
