But what does that even mean? How do we leverage an intersectional approach to make equity 'real'? In a previous post, we defined Intersectionality as the acknowledgement that our social identities overlap and intersect and form new, more specific identities with new implications. The individual identity groups we belong to - race, class, gender, sexuality, nationality, etc. - do not exist in a vacuum, and they cannot be compartmentalized.

I came to the idea of leveraging intersectionality because I'm familiar with Kimberlé Crenshaw's work - Crenshaw actually coined that phrase, intersectionality. She's a law professor and she came up with this idea that we all come from topics of interest, experiences in life, based on the intersections of what typically have been specific ways that we define ourselves.
